

ABSTRACT

The present invention is directed to an apparatus that allows patients who use inhalers to keep track of the number of doses they have or have left of their medicine. The present invention prevents patients from unknowingly running out of medicine and enables patients to promptly get a refill of their medication.